The Prime Minister and the Mayor of London pay a special visit to Network HQ

We had even more excitement than usual this morning at NHQ, with Prime Minister David Cameron and Mayor of London Boris Johnson paying a visit!

Accompanied by dozens of reporters and cameramen from all the major newspapers and TV channels, David and Boris spoke at length to staff and held a lively Q&A session.

Held just two days before the country goes to the polls, and televised live on Sky News, Mr Cameron paid tribute to Utility Warehouse, which he hailed as a great British success story. He said:

“Five years ago you employed four hundred people, today you employ eight hundred people. That’s massive progress, it’s an investment in our country, in the creation of jobs, and I want to thank you for what you’ve done”.

Boris Johnson also heaped praise on Utility Warehouse for being at the "cutting edge" of British industry.

Coming at such a crucial time in the election campaign, the visit by two of the best known politicians in the country is a huge endorsement for Utility Warehouse – and the business we are building together.

We've got some great photos of the visit available for you to download from the Extranet, and a two-minute 'highlights' video you can watch here. Please feel free to share this massive endorsement for our business on Facebook and other social media (use the hashtag #PMvisitsUW) with your family, friends and anyone who has ever questioned your decision to become a Partner.
